Home Paternity Testing

The results of a Home Paternity Test will show one of two possibilities:

- 1 If the tested, alleged father IS the biological father of the child or children tested, the results will show a 99.99% or higher probability of paternity.
- 2 If the tested, alleged father IS NOT the biological father, the results will show a 0% probability of paternity.

Legally Defensible Paternity Testing

The EasyDNA NATA accredited legal test can be used for family law court disputes, child maintenance issues, changing a child's birth certificate and also for immigration purposes involving children.

The majority of government departments in Australia require a DNA paternity test to be NATA accredited for it to be accepted. Therefore, if you need to submit your test result to a governmental department, this would be the most suitable test to use.

NATA = National Association of Testing Authorities.

Immigration Paternity Testing

The EasyDNA Immigration Test is ISO 17025 accredited and can be presented alongside immigration documents as proof of relationship, helping to support your immigration documentation.

EasyDNA has a suite of Relationship Tests suitable for Immigration purposes, including:
